Maximize Profits with Investment Studios

Here at investment studios we have one goal - to maximize profits from the markets. While we are currently focused on US equities markets - namely the NYSE and NASDAQ, we have plans in place to expand into many additional markets.

There are many firms out there that focus on scalping or short term trading. We consider scalping to be trades lasting seconds to minutes, and we characterize short term trades to mean trades from a few minutes to a few hours - rarely held overnight. Our goal is to focus on swing trading and position trading. Holding trades from a few days to a few weeks. This longer term style of trading does tend to leave profits on the table due to the swift nature of the markets, however this trading style is much more congruent with a lifestyle that doesn't involve sitting in front of a computer screen for several hours every day waiting for a short term set up. We here at investment studios want to focus on limiting our research and trade set-up activity to just an end of day review lasting no more than 30 minutes.

How do we accomplish this? We have a proprietary screening platform in place which scores each individual stock according to an entire host of indicators that we have tested and that have proven to be useful in short term stock movement predictions. We periodically recalibrate our indicators, weighing each individually according to its predictive value, in order to change with the market. We also maintain several different systems which can independently give us entry or exit signals.

As mentioned, we focus on equities on what on two of the major exchanges, the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) and the NASDAQ. While we also follow the AMEX, signals from this exchange are somewhat rare in our experience for our application. We focus exclusively on long plays, and currently do not use options. While options are certainly powerful and can make very quick and much more money due to the power of leverage, we have chosen to deal strictly in the actual instruments for the time being. Options trading signals could be integrated into our platform at a future date, however there are no current plans in place for this.

While we have been trading for over 20 years, this site is new. It is going to be in a constant state of growth until we have integrated everything that we have learned over the last 20+ years during our trading. We have plans to soon offer an email service which will alert you to opportunities we have identified. There will be free and paid versions of this email, as there will be free and paid versions of this site. Currently - everything is free.

Having said all that - welcome to our site! Feel free to poke around and see what interests you! We will be adding new pages and sprucing up the site continuously, so please check back if you are so inclined. For now take a look at our extensive candlestick section, or check out our slowly growing technical charts patterns section, both of which are listed immediately below. Thanks for visiting!
